Dr. J. H. Gillman, local veterinarian, gives The Falcon information that there are numerous outbreaks of hog cholera in several parts of the county and that he has been vaccinating large numbers of hogs the past two weeks. Losses have been pretty heavy in some sections, but vaccination has proved again, as it always has, effective in preventing the spread in herds where treatment has been given. Hog owners can not afford to run the risk of the heavy losses of valuable hogs when life insurance for them costs no more than a few cents for the inoculation. The Falcon owner has had his heavy loss in years past and every hog on our place was innoculated last week.

We will thresh sorghum seed for the public every Friday until March 1. J. A. McNabb & Sons, Somerville, R. 1. 2-11

Southern Cattleman's Association to Meet in Knoxville Next Year

Responding to urgent invitation from Knoxville business and civic organizations and cattlemen of East Tennessee the Southern Cattleman's Association in its annual meeting at Columbia, S. C., February 2, selected Knoxville as meeting place in 1922.

C. A. Willson, Dean of Agriculture, University of Tennessee wired officers of the associations, tendering to them free use of the buildings, grounds and facilities of the University for their meeting; Tennessee cattlemen will welcome this news with much interest as this is one of the strongest organizations in the South, its membership being made up of men who are placing the South in the limelight in a livestock way, Alfred R. Swann, Jr. one of Tennessee's big Shorthorn breeders was elected vice-president of the organization.

Strawberry Good Cash Crop In Tennessee

Farmers who are looking for a cash crop to add to their cropping system should consider the strawberry says Charles A. Keffer, Director, Division of Extension, University of Tennessee.

Tennessee is one of the largest producing states of early strawberries and where it has become well established in the farm operation, as in the Humboldt and Dayton district, two of the largest producing sections of the state, the experiences of the growers may be considered as a guide for future plantings. However, Director Keffer states that there are districts in the state where the strawberry has not been so extensively grown, but where the adaptability of the region to the crop has been fully established, and in these regions there can be no question as to the advisability of greater increased plantings.

The strawberry is ready for market in May when few other sources of money are available. It requires about the same cultivation as corn or cotton, and so prevents no new tillage problems. It can be harvested by women and children and thus presents special advantages to the man of a large family.

The original cost is small, which is something in its favor, especially to the poor man. And it has become a standard crop for which selling facilities have been worked out and the cash is soon in the hands of the grower.

One should remember that the strawberry requirements are just about the same as corn—the better the soil the bigger the crop. It is a mistake to assume that strawberries can be grown profitably on poor land. It takes land that will produce ten barrels of corn per acre to make a good crop of strawberries—say 100 crates per acre. And in addition to a fertile soil the strawberry, like corn, must have good cultivation to produce a profitable crop. There is no money in five barrels of corn per acre, neither is there profit in 50 crates of strawberries per acre at the average prices. So the farmer who is planting strawberries for the first time should start right. Give it good soil and good tillage.

Reports coming to the Division of Extension indicate that the strawberry crops will be increased to some extent this year. Several county agricultural agents are putting on campaigns for a greater production in their counties and are meeting with splendid success. It is believed that the farmers will profit by the growing of this crop.

This Bank Has Grown

The Somerville Bank & Trust Company is next to the youngest bank in the county, started business eleven years ago with a paid capital of $10,000 and has increased that paid capital to $25,000 without the stockholders paying any more money, the $15,000 additional capital being taken from the accumulated net earnings from time to time. The capital stock, $25,000, is now fully paid, making this the second largest bank in the county. On the progressive and business-like plan which has made this growth possible, we invite the business of Fayette county people.
